

TEAM CHARTERING PROGRAM

Imagine...

There's been a recent flurry of Tweeting going on about your team's performance. These discussions have drawn the interest of a top writer for a prominent business blog. Eager to get the behind the scenes story, the writer sends you an email asking you this question:

"The actions and results of the team you are currently leading are causing quite a stir. Will you paint a picture for me about what's gone on over the last two years to get you where you are today? Please comment on what your employees and customers are saying about the team."

When you sit back and ponder the answer, are you pleased that the team you've been leading is being recognized for its high performance levels, or are you concerned that the team's weaknesses have been exposed?
